Information library

A cure for information overload

A database designed to let you record, categorise and then find books, magazine and journal articles, plus news and other information.

You can print literature searches, and also store information about organisations and useful websites.

These databases are written in Microsoft Access and requires a copy of Access on each computer running the database. They are ready to run on a network, and the licence fee includes unlimited users on a single site network. This includes the software on CD with installation instructions and a user guide, plus email support for three months. Optionally the databases can be installed and set up for you by one of our specialists, and then demonstrated to your users.
